VOCATIONAL VISION

- To educate and equip students with biblically informed Christ-centered theological instincts so that they may live faithfully and serve sacrificially.
- To provide accessible scholarship that is theologically rich, historically informed, relevant to the present, and helpful for the future. This includes writing and speaking in the areas of systematic, historical, and practical theology.
- To promote collaboration among colleagues and students because I believe our theology is sharpened and the community is better served when robust communication and relationship accompany teaching and scholarship.

PROFESSIONAL SERVICE

- Templeton World Charity Foundation (TWCF) Grant = Part of the core team working on “The Christian Practice of Lament: Mechanisms of Change, Moderators, and Flourishing Outcomes,” awarded 2022 and ends 2025. Interdisciplinary team of psychologists, philosophers, and a theologian.
- Invited to give the 2022 Annual Moore College Lectures at Moore Theological College, Sydney Australia. This included 6 public lectures on Aug. 4, 8-12, 2022. Theme: A Theology of Christian Life.
- Invited to give the 2022 Annual Public Eliza Ferrie Lecture at Christ College, in Australia. Lecture theme: You’re Only Human. Evening of Aug. 12, 2022.
- Received the Randy Sorensen Memorial Award, 2019. From the Institute for Research in Psychology and Spirituality (IRPS).
- Received the Southeastern Theological Fellowship for “outstanding scholarship,” November, 2019.
- John Templeton Foundation Grant = Part of a nine-person Core team working on “Christian Meaning-Making, Suffering, and the Flourishing Life.” Team includes six psychologists, one philosopher, and two theologians (of which I would be one) (2018-present).
- A Core Research Team Advisor (1 of 8) for the “Amazing Grace Project,” funded by the John Templeton Foundation. I serve as a theological advisor to the team that is working to see if or how one might be able to study grace from a psychological and empirical perspective (2015-2020).

- A member of the international Protestant Drafting Committee of A Reforming Catholic Confession, completed in 2017.
- Recipient of John Templeton Foundation Grant for Spring 2014. Relocated for the term to the Center for Christian Thought at Biola University where I engaged in research and writing while working in an interdisciplinary context with other scholars. Together we labored under the larger umbrella theme of “Psychology and Spiritual Formation.” My project focused on the relationship between faith and suffering, giving chronic pain particular attention.
- On the Board of Editorial Consultants for Journal of Spiritual Formation and Soul Care (2015 – present)
- Contributing Editor for the journal Cultural Encounters: A Journal for the Theology of Culture (2003 – present).
- One of eighty “crafters” invited to shape the statement: “A Call to Spiritual Formation – San Antonio, 2009.” Led by Richard Foster, Eugene Peterson and others, the group comes from a variety of Christian traditions, diverse academic and congregational environments, as well as different geographical locations.
- Co-Director of Academic Lecture Series: responsible for bringing top scholars to campus to speak and interact with the community (2001-present)
